Paper III

Time Allowed : 2½ Hours]

[Maximum Marks : 150

Note : This Paper contains Seventy Five (75) multiple choice questions, each question carrying Two (2) marks. Attempt All questions.

Instructions :—

Read the following passage carefully and choose the most appropriate alternatives to answer the questions given below it :

The tiny fishing villages of Kerala on the southwest coast are among the most beautiful I have ever seen.

Scalloped with sandy beaches, shaded by mop-headed coconut palms, studded with charming thatched cottages, launching the elegantly proportioned rowing boats, the Kerala villages contain a most exotic life for the tourist, the stranger, the passing traveller. A Gauguin world. They also contain quite another life of their own.

Poverty of the degree one finds there is, perhaps, difficult for strangers to grasp. The Western idea of the Common Man is rather different from ours. For the fishermen and fisherwomen that populate the novel Chemmeen, natural forces are grimly real enemies or friends. It is far from a city view of life. The elements can destroy you and your family; they can also make it possible to live.....live for another year, that is. Under these merciless conditions, inevitably a merciless deity rules over life. To people brought up on the phrase "God is good", it may not be easy to accept the Indian idea, "The Creator is also the Destroyer". In Kerala villages that I have seen—where villagers who have only one cloth to wear—wash it in a river, canal or local pond, carefully, because they are in a public place, leaving half the cloth wrapped around the body while the other half is wet—the thought that anyone has a right to security and beneficence is less compelling than it is in the West.
